Beauchamp Tower, Byward Tower. The Byward Tower guards the bridge over the moat by which visitors enter the Tower of London. The twelve towers of the inner ward—of which the Beauchamp Tower, built in 1199, is one—were at one time all used as prisons, and if stones could speak we should hear many a tragic story. Its first-floor walls are covered with inscriptions left by prisoners; among them the pathetic line, "A Passage Perilous maketh a Port Pleasant." Many a great soul passed through this "Passage Perilous" to Glorious Immortality!
